Victoria Amazonica Coffee Table

by Arthur Casas, 2022

Named after the Victoria amazonica, a magnificent water lily native to the Amazon Rainforest, the Victoria Amazonica Coffee Table draws inspiration from the plant's elegant, organic form. The design features four independent, petal-like segments that glide along a hidden track, allowing the table to shift between multiple configurations. It can remain in a more closed position, with the petals gathered together, or open, bringing the table's surfaces—and the objects atop them—closer to those seated nearby.

Part of the Tapajós Collection, launched in partnership with Espasso in December 2022.

Arthur Casas

Since the 1980s Arthur Casas has become one of the most prolific and innovative architects to come out of Brazil. Casas has working studios in both Sao Paulo and New York with work spreading from Paris, Rio de Janeiro, Tokyo to Buenos Aires, and more.

Sao Paulo, Arthur Casas' birthplace, has instilled in him his cosmopolitan spirit and the will to look outwards and embrace the design world. This ethos can be seen within Casas' work, which is defined by his indistinguishable and ever-changing designs. As an architect, Casas was unique in his indifference to define and classify, which resulted in him constantly evolving his architectural and design style.

Casas believes architecture and household design are inextricably linked. Casas can only see the meaning of the spaces he designs if he can comprehend the furniture that was designed or chosen for them. Casas is an artisanal craftsman with his furniture designs suppressing all unnecessary details. His designs move towards nature and handicraft pieces and away from industrialization. He brings forward the mid-century modern aesthetic, while referencing the rich Brazilian wood making tradition. This results in unique and contemporary pieces of furniture full of character while still adhering to a strong ethical standpoint.
